Carnivorous Plants

New Self Watering System

Easy Care

Plants Eat Pests

Carnivorous plants are a useful pest control and they gain interest from children who may then become interested in growing plants. They also produce beautiful leaves and flowers. I am growing a range of these plants and can either sell them wholesale or retail either to the local area or elsewhere by mail order. They include sundews (Drosera), Venus Fly Traps and pitcher plants (Nepenthes and Sarracenia). I plan to use any profits to fund projects to benefit communities. It would be appreciated if you could ask some people if they are interested or share an email or print out that I could send you. I could pay a commission to people who promote the plants and send me referrals.

My plants have an advantage over others that you buy because in the base of the pot I have inserted a self watering wick system that means easy care which saves you time. It reduces the risk of the plants drying out and dying. The plants can stand on top of an empty pot in a tray of water with the wicks hanging down into the water. Alternatively, a number of plants can stand in an open mesh tray or on some mesh above the tray which holds water and hanging wicks. I can provide the pots and trays. If the water level drops below the level of the bottom of the pot, the capillary wicks draw up water to keep the soil moist. Commercial capillary matting is used that should last for years.

The water level can be about 12mm above the base of the pot. However, if it drops about 50mm below the base of the pot the wicks should still enable sufficient moisture to be provided to the soil.

Plants are all labeled with both their scientific and common names. They also have a small tag in the pot with a number. If you lose the larger tag you can contact me and give me the number so that I can identify the plant for you.

I also have other websites relating to separate topics, free groups, ideas and rare information to help people. They are briefly summarised at TrueSolutions.info. They include plans for groups to research and compile a list of the best products, services and ideas including ones that have been suppressed. We plan to form or find databases of the best:

1. reputable companies
2. forms of promotion
3. concise summaries of important information
4. people willing to support worthy projects.

There is also:

1. a weather network to provide information.
2. a plan to form a large data base of honest companies and organisations that can help inventors.
3. a memory test and plans to find what will improve your memory.
4. new ideas to restore democracy and prosperity to the country.
5. a group to search for people whose prayers make a noticeable difference. They could help and pray for us and lead us to the truth.

6. a group to search for and research suppressed inventions that are claimed to be much better than well known products. I have also developed many practical inventions with huge advantages over competing systems. I plan to use any profits to fund these plans.

If you are interested in any of these topics, I could send you letters to share relating to any of my separate websites. Please let me know of anyone that can help with these plans. It would be good to get people in the community to help with these things as they could help others greatly and create many jobs.
